COVID-19 & Flu Shot Update

We have had a few recent cases of COVID-19 among our team and continue to follow CDC guidelines for contact tracing and isolation. As a reminder, please remain home if you are sick to minimize the spread of any illness, contact your Manager/Supervisor and speak to Human Resources about protocol. If you test positive for Covid, you must isolate for at least 5 days. At this time, contact only requires wearing a mask and monitoring for symptoms. Staying home is not necessary unless you are ill or test positive. You can find the CDC guidelines here:

Isolation for when you have COVID-19:

Please also consider taking advantage of our on-site flu and COVID-19 vaccines on October 12 & 13th

Former pro football star J.J. Watt is the new face of Miller Lite's football program. Watt, a three-time defensive player of the year and five-time pro bowler who played 12 seasons in Houston and Arizona, will star in a new ad that debuts this week and plays off his jersey number, 99, while giving legal-age drinkers a chance to win Miller Lite.

Passwords, Passwords, Passwords, they are everywhere!

Log on to your bank, password. Log on to Netflix, password. Log on to email, password. Log on to a mailing list you signed up for, password. If you use the same password for each, then you are opening yourself up to having a really bad day.

Nonmonetary service providers, like the mailing list you signed up for, DO NOT have to notify you if they are breached; your login information is actually their data, not yours. Once user lists that have your email and password hit the dark web, the bad guys will start using that combination in different websites, banking, credit cards, Netflix you name it.

Password strength is another place many users fall short. Any sports team with #1 on the end is in the top 100 used passwords, athlete names with jersey numbers are in there too. The most common password is, wait for it, password; really it is. In the top 10 are Superman#1, qwertyuiop (the top row of letters on a keyboard) and 1234567890; I can provide source material if needed.

A complex password 8 characters long, like l3[c9A)5, takes 8 hours to compromise with today's processing power; 5 years ago, it was like 20 thousand years. They need to be at least 12 characters long today to be at 30 thousand years.

My point to all of this is, do not use the same password across sites. Make your passwords complex and at least 12 characters long; I use 20 where permitted. This cannot be managed you say, but it can.

The only way you can use different passwords for all your different sites, which are also complex, is to use a password manager, a vault. I am not here to tell you which manager/vault to use, but they can create and store all your login information. There are even free ones available that you can try out.
